Life Orientation Exemplar 2011:

The Routledge Handbook of Media Use and Well-Being Leonard Reinecke, Mary Beth Oliver, 2016-06-23 The Routledge Handbook of Media Use and Well Being serves as the first international review of the current state of this fast developing area of research The volume provides a multifaceted perspective on the beneficial as well as the detrimental effects of media exposure on psychological health and well being As a first mover it will define the field of media use and well being and provide an essential resource for research and teaching in this area The volume is structured along four central considerations Processes presents concepts that provide a theoretical bridge between media use and well being such as psychological need satisfaction recovery from stress and strain self presentation and self enhancement or parasocial interactions with media characters providing a comprehensive understanding of the underlying processes that drive psychological health and well being through media Moderators examines both risk factors that promote negative effects on well being and protective factors that foster positive media effects Contexts bridges the gap between theory and real life by illustrating how media use can influence well being and satisfaction in very different life domains covering the full spectrum of everyday life by addressing the public private and work spheres Audiences takes a look at the influence of life phases and life situations on the interplay of media use and well being questioning whether various user groups differ with regard to the effects of media exposure Bringing together the expertise of outstanding international scholars from multiple disciplines including communication media psychology social psychology clinical psychology and media education this handbook sheds new light on the role of media in influencing and affecting emotions Spatial Transformation Milad Abassiharofteh, Jessica Baier, Angelina Göb, Insa Thimm, Andreas Eberth, Falco Knaps, Vilja Larjosto, Fabiana Zebner, 2022 What can be understood by spatial transformation how does it manifest itself and what are the characteristics of transformation processes This Research Report addresses these questions and presents current research projects and approaches from an academic and practical planning perspective A central point of reference is the concept of a Great Transformation which stems from an expert report by the German Advisory Council on Global Change WBGU It outlines the profound changes in the economy and society towards sustainability that will become necessary in the future describing them as a Great Transformation Likewise social upheavals also manifest themselves in space enabling spatial changes to be understood as spatial transformations However on a detailed level it remains unclear what is to be understood by spatial transformation processes and how they manifest themselves Against the background of this need for further research this Research Report addresses concrete issues in the research and shaping of spatial transformation processes The aim is to systematise the largely unordered or disordered knowledge of spatial transformation processes and to contribute to a common understanding of the associated concepts which can form the basis for further research and for the steering of these processes The articles on the following topics show how spatial and social transformation processes are mutually dependent and what opportunities and challenges inter and transdisciplinary research designs can offer in this context Perspectives on transformation processes Social and settlement structures in change Regional development and innovation Transformation processes in the so called Global South New challenges for planning processes and stakeholders Research on transformation The contributions to theoretical methodological and practical approaches are intended to stimulate a critical discussion on spatial transformation that is open to new interdisciplinary perspectives

Perceiving and Acting in the Real World: From Neural Activity to Behavior Simona Monaco,Gavin Buckingham,Irene Sperandio,J.Douglas Crawford,2016-12-07 One remarkable ability of the human brain is to process large amounts of information about our surroundings to allow us to interact effectively with them In everyday life the most common way to interact with objects is by reaching grasping lifting and manipulating them Although these may sound like simple tasks the perceptual properties of the target object such as its location size shape and orientation all need to be processed in order to set the movement parameters that allow an accurate reach to grasp to lift movement Several brain areas work in concert to process this outstanding amount of visual information and drive the execution of a motor plan in just a few hundred milliseconds How are these processes orchestrated In developing this type of comprehensive knowledge about the interactions between objects perception and goal directed actions we have a window into the mechanisms underlying the functioning of the visuo motor system With this research topic we aim to further understand the neural mechanisms that mediate our interactions with the world Therefore we particularly encourage submission of papers that attempt to relate such findings to real world situations by investigating behavioural and neural correlates of information processing related to eye hand coordination and visually guided actions including reaching grasping and lifting movements This topic welcomes submissions of original research using any relevant techniques and methods from behavioural kinematics kinetics to neuroimaging and transcranial magnetic stimulation TMS as well as neuropsychological studies

Understanding Cognitive Development Barbara Landau, 2016-09-17 The papers in this volume examine the state of the art in key areas of developmental cognitive neuroscience focusing on theoretically driven research on cognition and its development The past decade has seen an increasing number of empirical papers on the relationship between brain and cognitive development But despite the clearly burgeoning interest in this topic there is a relative paucity of work motivated by deep theoretical questions about the nature of cognition and its development Many papers are still in the mode of reporting brain cognition correlations with a focus on regional activations during brain imaging a useful approach but one that is limited with respect to its contributions to understanding the structure of cognition and its development The papers in this special issue of Cognitive Neuropsychology consider a number of domains and mechanisms in cognition including language number space faces reading memory and attention and represent the wealth of approaches and techniques that can be used to shed light on the nature of cognitive development in brain and mind These include cross species comparisons studies of development under experiential deprivation or genetic differences classical developmental experimentation and imaging techniques such as NIRS and fMRI which have recently been applied to developmental questions The combination of solid theorizing together with a broad range of approaches allows a critical but constructive look at the latest findings in the field relevant to answering enduring questions about cognition its development and its realization in the developing brain
