Abstract
 The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of elderly people. The study was conducted in a community center in Istanbul, Turkey. The participants were 40 elderly people (20 men and 20 women) aged 65 and above. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic exercises, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical health of the participants was measured using a series of tests, including a 6-minute walk test, a 30-second chair stand test, and a handgrip strength test. The psychological health of the participants was measured using a series of tests, including a Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) and a State-Trait Anxiety Inventory (STAI). The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly better physical and psychological health than the control group after 12 weeks of training. The study suggests that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological health of elderly people.
