

Explanations and Examples

The number pairs that total ten are foundational for students' ability to work fluently within base-ten numbers and operations. Different models, such as ten-frames, cubes, two-color counters, etc., assist students in visualizing these number pairs for ten.

Example 1:

Students place three objects on a ten frame and then determine how many more are needed to "make a ten." Students may use electronic versions of ten frames to develop this skill.

Example 2:

The student snaps ten cubes together to make a "train."

- Student breaks the "train" into two parts. S/he counts how many are in each part and record the associated equation ($10 = \underline{\quad} + \underline{\quad}$).
- Student breaks the "train" into two parts. S/he counts how many are in one part and determines how many are in the other part without directly counting that part. Then s/he records the associated equation (if the counted part has 4 cubes, the equation would be $10 = 4 + \underline{\quad}$).
- Student covers up part of the train, without counting the covered part. S/he counts the cubes that are showing and determines how many are covered up. Then s/he records the associated equation (if the counted part has 7 cubes, the equation would be $10 = 7 + \underline{\quad}$).

Example 3:

The student tosses ten two-color counters on the table and records how many of each color is facing up.
