

Comparison of ISTQB vs ISEB Software Testing Qualifications

What's the difference?

This article aims to compare the ISEB and ISTQB Certification schemes for Software Testing. We will also outline the content and structure of the certifications, and demonstrate the link between them.

This document provides important information for those who already have the ISTQB or ISEB Foundation qualification and need to choose the next step.

ISTQB & ISTQB Certification Scheme Structures

The foundation levels of both certifications are transferable as ISEB have adopted the syllabus from the ISTQB Foundation level. This situation is a positive as it provides the candidate with alternative options [i.e. once a candidate has completed the Foundation level, he/she can choose to start either certification].

Once the Foundation level is complete the differences between the certifications become clear, ISEB has an intermediate level preceding its practitioner level, while the ISTQB syllabus does not.

Both certifications changed in 2008, with the schemes having a new structure, composition and order in which students attend and sit the examinations. We have outlined both qualifications below:

The ISTQB Advanced Course in Software Testing Overview

The ISTQB was founded as an International Software Testing Qualifications Board in Edinburgh in November 2002. The ISTQB's role is to support a single, universally accepted, international qualification scheme, by providing the core syllabi and by setting guidelines for accreditation and examination for national boards.

The International Software Testing Qualification Board (ISTQB) is a fast growing and democratic organisation which is made up of an assembly of member boards, with each board representing major software and system developing countries and regions. There are currently 45 member boards, the Irish Software Testing Board (ISTB) is the member board for Ireland. To learn more about the ISTQB and ISTB, visit their websites at www.istqb.org and www.istb.ie

Process Based Unification for Multi-model Software Process Improvement Z.D. Kelemen, 2013-01-30 Many different quality approaches are available in the software industry Some of the approaches such as ISO 9001 are not software specific i.e. they define general requirements for an organization and they can be used at any company Others such as Automotive SPICE have been derived from a software specific approach and can be used for improving specific in this case automotive processes Some are created to improve development processes e.g. CMMI for Development others focus on services e.g. CMMI for Services and again others are related to particular processes such as software testing e.g. TMMi or resource management e.g. People CMM A number of differences among quality approaches exist and there can be various situations in which the usage of multiple approaches is required e.g. to strengthen a particular process with multiple quality approaches or to reach certification of the compliance to a number of standards First of all it has to be decided which approaches have potential for the organization In many cases one approach does not contain enough information for process implementation Consequently the organization may need to use several approaches and the decision has to be made how the chosen approaches can be used simultaneously This area is called Multi model Software Process Improvement MSPI The simultaneous usage of multiple quality approaches is called the multi model problem In this dissertation we propose a solution for the multi model problem which we call the Process Based
