

INTRODUCTION

The Middle East is one of the regions that have significant wealth in their natural resources. However, given that the main resource in the region is fuel that drives world economies, world powers have often attempted to influence the region with the aim of gaining access to these resources. The world's economic giants and superpowers have developed their wealth and economics using fuel obtained from the Middle East. The film addresses critical underlying issues that have influenced the economic, social and political environment in the Middle East. This paper will critically evaluate the film's success of failure in illustrating the influences of western counties with the aim of gaining control of fuel reserves through fostering conflict in the region.

BODY

The film presents a scenario where the world's oil reserves are almost depleted, and the only country in the Middle East is facing the challenge of choosing an economic partner with whom to trade. The existence of conflict between western interests and other economies such as China and Russia are depicted in the film in the form of a race towards controlling the oil reserves that remain in the world (Gaghan, 2005). Energy is a critical resource that gives the country a significant advantage in the world among others. In essence, the country's access to unlimited sources of energy makes it capable of achieving significant economic and political developments against other countries in the world. Energy is characterized as the basis within which a country's economic power and influence in a global perspective is measured.

Practical Approaches to Teaching Film Rachel S. Ritterbusch, 2020-07-24 Rachel Ritterbusch's Practical Approaches to Teaching Film is a collection of essays focusing on the use of film in settings ranging from an introductory film class to an upper division Women's Studies course. Drawing on their experience in the classroom, contributors to this anthology show how movies can be used to promote critical thinking, create an awareness of the male gaze, challenge dominant ideology, and unmask the constructedness of film. This volume treats a wide variety of film texts from box office hits like The Da Vinci Code to underappreciated art films such as Susan Streitfeld's Female Perversions from Pleasant Moko and other French classics to more contemporary francophone works like Chaos and Rosetta from self-reflexive films that interrogate the act of filmmaking itself to those that draw attention to the phallogocentric nature of cinematic apparatus. Common to all these essays is the belief that if used judiciously, film can be a valuable pedagogical tool. Aimed both at those currently teaching film and those wishing to do so, this volume provides practical support in the form of sample syllabi, assignments, and a glossary of film terms.

Film Analysis Jeffrey Geiger, R. L. Rutsky, 2013-08-12 Film Analysis offers concise analyses of fifty diverse and historically significant films, each written exclusively for the text by a leading scholar. Written with the undergraduate in mind, the essays are clear, readable, and great models for students to follow in helping them to hone their own writing. The Second Edition includes six new essays, a new detailed guide to writing film analysis, and an extensive up-to-date glossary of critical film terms.

abstract: Superhero movies have been the biggest money-making machine in recent years. Spiderman, Superman, Batman, Iron Man—all have been successful movies, and all protagonists have been male. This work aims to examine the role of women in superhero movies and how they have changed.
