Pathways from agriculture to nutrition in India: Implications for sustainable development goals Babu, Suresh Chandra, Sharma, Ajay, Das, Mousumi, 2017-06-09 emphasizes the importance of identifying different pathways from agriculture to nutrition for better nutritional outcomes Using a disaggregated dashboard approach with agriculture food consumption and demographic and health survey data this study examines the progress of Indian states toward the Sustainable Development Goals There is evidence of both disconnects and linkages among food security indicators along the agriculture nutrition pathways Through a broadened and comprehensive approach under one coordinating body with a good set of improved interventions and governance Indian states can attain food and nutrition security by 2030 Such evidence based policy making is need of the hour to observe impact on the ground rather than framing policies based on ideologies At a time when the focus is more and more on impact the shift Agronomy for Development James Sumberg,2017-07-06 Over the last decade there has been renewed interest in food security and the state of the global food system Population growth climate change and food price spikes have combined to focus new attention on the technologies and institutions that underpin the production and consumption of food that is varied nutritious and safe Knowledge politics within development oriented agronomy set the stage for some models of agricultural development to be favoured over others with very real implications for the food security and wellbeing of many millions of people Agronomy for Development demonstrates how the analysis of knowledge politics can shed valuable new light on current debates about agricultural development and food security Using bio physical and social sciences perspectives to address the political economy of the production and use of knowledge in development this edited collection reflects on the changing politics of knowledge within the field of agronomy and the ways in which these politics feed and reflect the interests of a broad set of actors This book is aimed at professionals working in agricultural research as well as students and practitioners of agricultural rural and international development

Local, Traditional and Indigenous Food Systems in the 21st Century to Combat Obesity, Undernutrition and Climate Change, 2nd edition Rebecca Kanter,Sofia Boza,Gina Kennedy,2023-07-31 Traditional and indigenous food systems have existed for centuries and were in balance with local food supplies globally However between the mid 20th and early 21st century the green revolution dramatically altered food production which in turn affected the inclusivity of traditional production systems within food systems and subsequently traditional dietary intakes This change was accompanied by lifestyle changes and spurred a global nutrition transition Today the world faces a global syndemic of obesity undernutrition and climate change A new call to action to create food systems that nourish people and sustain the planet is needed Traditional and indigenous food systems have long been recognized as systems that can both support good human nutrition as well as maintain a balance with nature There is an underutilized knowledge base around traditional and indigenous food systems This includes the knowledge of nutritious species traditional culinary preparations and cultural practices Greater agricultural production of underutilized species can result in more sustainable agricultural and food systems which can also help improve livelihoods and food security Traditional and indigenous cultural practices with respect to both land and water management as well as culinary practices contribute to both sustainable food production and consumption These practices require a greater evidence base in order to be incorporated into public health nutrition initiatives related to improving dietary quality such as food based dietary guidelines for example An increased focus on the importance of local traditional and indigenous food systems and nutrition could therefore help countries to improve human nutrition and ideally help mitigate the global syndemic of obesity undernutrition and climate change This Research Topic will focus on documenting diverse local food systems and promoting elements within them that can help improve nutrition and health both human and
