

Movie Critique: Mise En Scene

Mise en scene is a film that covers the obvious features of films - the actors and the settings. It comprises of props, make-ups, and costumes besides other artificial and natural details which characterize the filmed spaces. Mise en scene incorporates cinematography and film editing process which influences the film's appearance to be true in the viewers' eyes. The various design assist in conveying the vision of a film through creating a sense of space and time, as well as setting the mood and in some instances proposing a character's thoughts.

Mise En Scene has employed certain techniques in the film with an aim of creating dominance. For instance, Enid who is the major character in the movie is distinguishable from all other characters and objects. In comparison to the largest objects in the film, the techniques successfully portrayed Enid to be the most appealing. The creation of dominance is further portrayed by Enid's mode of dressing that matches what is expected of the main character. For instance, she dresses in brightly colored clothing unlike the entire coloring of the movie which is characterized by dull colors. Similarly, Seymour a character in the movie is dressed in brown and dark clothes which are dull colors, thereby making Enid outstanding. The film is characterized by moderate lighting; an issue that is perceived to be as a result of lack of brightly lit scenes; moreover, movie does lack many shadows. Despite that imbalance in shadow and light, Mise En Scene still managed to retain its mood. It is probable that moderate lighting suited the film because it is a character grounded drama/comedy.

The shot and camera proxemics throughout the movie fitted it appropriately.
