A very small percentage of people may experience a seizure when exposed to certain visual images, including flashing lights or patterns that may appear in video games. Even people who have no history of seizures or epilepsy may have an undiagnosed condition that can cause these "photosensitive epileptic seizures" while watching video games.

These seizures may have a variety of symptoms, including lightheadedness, altered vision, eye or face twitching, jerking or shaking of arms or legs, disorientation, confusion, or involuntary loss of awareness. Seizures may also cause loss of consciousness or convulsions that can lead to injury from falling down or striking nearby objects.

Immediately stop playing and consult a doctor if you experience any of these symptoms. Parents should watch for and ask their children about the following symptoms: dizziness, blurred vision, nausea, vomiting, headache, fatigue, or loss of consciousness. The risk of photosensitive seizures has not been reduced by taking the following precautions: sit farther from the screen, use a smaller screen, play in a well-lit room, the best play when you are alone or supervised.

If you or any of your relatives have a history of seizures or epilepsy, consult a doctor before donating.

Abstract:

The Entertainment Software Rating Board (ESRB) ratings are designed to provide consumers, especially parents, with concise, impartial guidance about the age-appropriateness and content of computer and video games. This information can help consumers make informed purchase decisions about which games they deem suitable for their children and families.
