Ahmed,Bennett

Foddy,2015-12-07 For much of the 20th century theories of addictive behaviour and motivation were polarized between two models The first model viewed addiction as a moral failure for which addicts are rightly held responsible and judged accordingly The second model in contrast viewed addiction as a specific brain disease caused by neurobiological adaptations occurring in response to chronic drug or alcohol use and over which addicts have no choice or control As our capacity to observe neurobiological phenomena improved the second model became scientific orthodoxy increasingly dominating addiction research and informing public understandings of addiction More recently however a dissenting view has emerged within addiction research based partly on new scientific research and partly on progress in philosophical and psychological understandings of relevant mental phenomena This view does not revert to treating addiction as a moral failure but nonetheless holds that addictive behaviour is fundamentally motivated by choice and subject to at least a degree of voluntary control On this alternative model of addiction addictive behaviour is an instrumental means to ends that are desired by the individual although much controversy exists with respect to the rationality or irrationality of these ends the degree and nature of the voluntary control of addictive behaviour and motivation the explanation of the difference between addictive and non addictive behaviour and motivation and lastly the extent to which addictive behaviour and motivation is correctly characterised as pathological or diseased This research topic includes papers in the traditions of neuroscience psychology philosophy law and social science that explore alternative understandings of addiction Sustainability Standards and Global Governance Archana Negi,Jorge Antonio Pérez-Pineda,Johannes Blankenbach,2020-07-02 This open access book focuses on the issue of sustainability standards from the perspective of both global governance frameworks and emerging economies It stems from the recognition that the accelerated pace of economic globalization has generated production and consumption patterns that are generating sustainability concerns Sustainability standards and regulations are increasingly being used in a bid to make global consumption and production more sustainable Given the dense inter connectedness of economic affairs globally the use of sustainability standards has become a concern of global governance who face the challenge of achieving a balance between the use of standards for genuine sustainability objectives and not allowing them to turn into instruments of protectionism or coercion The emerging economies given their increasing engagement with the global economy are most impacted by the use of sustainability standards The emphasis of emerging economies in this book is retained both by using case studies from these economies and by collating perceptions and assessments of those located in these economies The case studies included span sectors such as palm oil forestry food quality vehicular emissions and water standards and address the problems unique to the emerging economies including capacity building for compliance with standards adapting international standards in domestic contexts and addressing the exclusion of small and medium enterprises etc Complex interfaces and dynamics of a global nature are not limited to the thematic of this book but also extend to the process through which it was written This book brings together insights from developed as well as emerging economies Germany India Mexico Brazil Indonesia Pakistan Mexico and China It also brings together scholars and practitioners to jointly ponder upon the conceptual aspects of the global frameworks for sustainability standards This book is a very useful resource for researchers and practitioners alike and provides valuable insights for policy makers as well
