

The book cover features a close-up of a young Black woman's face, looking down with a somber expression. Her face is partially obscured by a large, translucent, circular shape that resembles a lens or a portal. Below her face, the background transitions into a sepia-toned illustration of a plantation with several wooden slave quarters and a group of people in the foreground.

Situating Octavia Butler's Kindred as a Response to the Black Power and Black Studies Movements Noelle Elizabeth

Lewis, 2021 There has been great scholarly debate over the genre categorization of Kindred yet there is a lot of missing scholarship regarding the situation of Kindred within the Black Power Movement of the 1970s This piece emphasizes Octavia Butler's placement of Kindred within the greater scope of the Black Power Movement and her reasoning for doing so As an extension of the Black Power Movement the education aspect of the novel is greatly overlooked and the main goal with this work is to emphasize the importance of education within the novel more specifically as it is situated within the Black Studies Movement As education is important Butler utilizes lived experiences within her writing as a means to emphasize that education cannot fully encapsulate a period of time such as slavery Therefore I argue that as Butler has situated Kindred's characters as a response to the Black Power Movement she has also established a relationship between education and experience and how those aspects fuel the main characters within the novel

Re-forming the Past A. Timothy Spaulding, 2005 The slave experience was a defining one in American history and not surprisingly has been a significant and powerful trope in African American literature In Re Forming the Past A Timothy Spaulding examines contemporary revisions of slave narratives that use elements of the fantastic to redefine the historical and literary constructions of American slavery In their rejection of mimetic representation and traditional historiography postmodern slave narratives such as Ishmael Reed's Flight to Canada Octavia Butler's Kindred Toni Morrison's Beloved Charles Johnson's Ox Herding Tale and Middle Passage Jewelle Gomez's The Gilda Stories and Samuel Delaney's Stars in My Pocket like Grains of Sand set out to counter the usual slave narrative's reliance on realism and objectivity by creating alternative histories based on subjective fantastic and non realistic representations of slavery As these texts critique traditional conceptions of history identity and aesthetic form they simultaneously re invest these concepts with a political agency that harkens back to the original project of the 19th century slave narratives In their rejection of mimetic representation and traditional historiography Spaulding contextualizes postmodern slave narrative By addressing both literary and popular African American texts Re Forming the Past expands discussions of both the African American literary tradition and postmodern culture

Freedom Beyond Confinement Michael Ra-Shon Hall, 2021-11-16 Freedom Beyond Confinement examines the cultural history of African American travel and the lasting influence of travel on the imagination particularly of writers of literary fiction and nonfiction Using the paradox of freedom and confinement to frame the ways travel represented both opportunity and restriction for African Americans the book details the intimate connection between travel and imagination from post Reconstruction ca 1877 to the present Analysing a range of sources from the black press and periodicals to literary fiction and nonfiction the book charts the development of critical representation of travel from the foundational press and periodicals which offered African Americans crucial information on travel precautions and possibilities notably during the era of Jim Crow to the woefully understudied literary fiction that would later provide some of the most compelling and lasting portrayals of the freedoms and constraints African Americans associated with travel Travel experiences often challenging and vexed provided the raw data with which writers produced images and ideas meaningful as they learned to navigate negotiate and even challenge racialized and gendered impediments to their mobility In their writings African Americans worked to realize a vision and state of freedom informed by those often difficult experiences of mobility In telling this story the book hopes to center literary fiction in studies of travel where fiction has largely remained absent
