Maya Exodus Indigenous Struggle For Citizenship In Chiapas:

Maya Exodus Heidi Moksnes, 2013-07-29 Maya Exodus offers a richly detailed account of how a group of indigenous people has adopted a global language of human rights to press claims for social change and social justice. Anthropologist Heidi Moksnes describes how Catholic Maya in the municipality of Chenalh in Chiapas, Mexico, have changed their position vis-à-vis the Mexican state from being loyal clients dependent on a patron to being citizens who have rights as a means of exodus from poverty. Moksnes lived in Chenalh in the mid 1990s and has since followed how Catholic Maya have adopted liberation theology and organized a religious and political movement to both advance their sociopolitical position in Mexico and restructure local Maya life. She came to know members of the Catholic organization Las Abejas shortly before they made headlines when forty-five members, including women and children, were killed by Mexican paramilitary troops because of their sympathy with the Zapatistas. In the years since the massacre at Acteal, Las Abejas has become a global symbol of indigenous pacifist resistance against state oppression. The Catholic Maya in Chenalh see their poverty as a legacy of colonial rule perpetuated by the present Mexican government and believe that their suffering is contrary to the will of God. Moksnes shows how this antagonism toward the state is exacerbated by the government's recent neoliberal policies which have ended pro-peasant programs while employing a discourse on human rights. In this context, Catholic Maya debate the value of pressing the state with their claims. Instead, they seek independent routes to influence and resources through the Catholic Diocese and nongovernmental organizations, relations however that also help to create new dependencies. This book incorporates voices of Maya men and women as they form new identities, rethink central conceptions of being human, and assert citizenship rights. Maya Exodus deepens our understanding of the complexities involved in striving for social change. Ultimately, it highlights the contradictory messages marginalized peoples encounter when engaging with the globally celebrated human rights discourse.

Human Rights, Hegemony, and Utopia in Latin America Camilo Pérez Bustillo, Karla Hernández Mares, 2016-06-10 Human Rights Hegemony and Utopia in Latin America: Poverty, Forced Migration and Resistance in Mexico and Colombia by Camilo Pérez Bustillo and Karla Hernández Mares explores the evolving relationship between hegemonic and counter-hegemonic visions of human rights within the context of cases in contemporary Mexico and Colombia and their broader implications. The first three chapters provide an introduction to the book's overall theoretical framework which will then be applied to a series of more specific issues: migrant rights and the rights of indigenous peoples and cases primarily focused on contexts in Mexico and Colombia which are intended to be illustrative of broader trends in Latin America and globally.

Between enchanted town and multicultural city Sandra Cañas Cuevas,2014 This dissertation is an ethnographic analysis of state led multiculturalism and its impacts on indigenous people in the former colonial city of San Cristobal de Las Casas in Southern Mexico Based on an eighteen month period of fieldwork it examines how the colonial order is being redeployed in the urban space through multicultural programs that seek to govern indigenous people In particular it discusses how indigenous people are transformed into multicultural citizens and their lands into natural reserves In showing how indigenous people are being produced as citizens and governed through particular citizenship regimes it also emphasizes on how they produce themselves as political subjects Drawing upon indigenous people experiences at the urban periphery this dissertation discusses the complexities and contradictions they face in the process of building a community of their own It investigates how multiple citizenships religious and gender regimes coexist in the urban periphery and how indigenous people navigate them in the process of building new forms of belonging This dissertation complicates the civil society vs State opposition by focusing on how citizenship among indigenous people is built on a daily basis through contradictory and problematic articulations Through their articulations with peasant organizations the State political parties NGOs and religious discourses indigenous people become agents of their own government They do so by directing each other actions and decisions shaping their leaders practices and holding them accountable and monitoring gender relations and religious practice to secure women s participation in both politics and religion Finally this dissertation argues that indigenous people in the urban periphery of San Crist bal de Las Casas refuse to become multicultural citizens Instead they struggle to build horizontal and inclusive communities through land occupation and conversion to Islam and in the process they are calling into question the limits and contradictions of state led multiculturalism and expanding liberal notions of citizenship To
