These findings suggest that the presence of a social network, particularly one that includes family and friends, is an important factor in the recovery of individuals with mental illness. The findings also suggest that the presence of a social network is an important factor in the recovery of individuals with mental illness.

Dr. Bevan's letter to Mr. Thomas is full of good sense. My thoughtless letter made me think what the friends of the cause might say. I have been thinking about it since. I have been thinking about it since. I have been thinking about it since.
