CAUTION

Keep Kestrel Sensor Window Clean! It is designed to provide accurate measurement of current conditions only. Contaminating the sensor (dust, dirt, rain, etc.) will cause inaccurate readings. Clean regularly.

Readings are based on the sensor's internal temperature. If the sensor is exposed to direct sunlight or other heat sources, readings will be inaccurate. Readings will be more accurate if the sensor is shaded. Readings will be more accurate if the sensor is not exposed to direct sunlight or other heat sources.

To maximize the accuracy and reliability of your readings:

- Ensure that your Kestrel Meter is in good working order and within factory calibration.
- Avoid exposure to direct sunlight or other heat sources when taking readings.
- Avoid exposure to wind gusts or other factors that may affect the sensor's internal temperature.
- Avoid exposure to rain or other moisture when taking readings.

Use common sense and good judgment when relying on your Kestrel Weather Meter to make any decisions regarding safety, health or property protection.
