National Maths Paper November 2013:

Mathematics and Transition to School Bob Perry, Amy MacDonald, Ann Gervasoni, 2015-01-09 This edited book brings together for the first time an international collection of work focused on two important aspects of any young child's life learning mathematics and starting primary or elementary school The chapters take a variety of perspectives and integrate these two components in sometimes explicit and sometimes more subtle ways The key issues and themes explored in this book are the mathematical and other strengths that all participants in the transition to school bring to this period of a child's life the opportunities provided by transition to school for young children's mathematics learning the importance of partnerships among adults and among adults and children for effective school transitions and mathematics learning and teaching the critical impact of expectations on their mathematics learning as children start school the importance of providing children with meaningful challenging and relevant mathematical experiences throughout transition to school the entitlement of children and educators to experience assessment and instructional pedagogies that match the strengths of the learners and the teachers the importance for the aspirations of children families communities educators and educational organisations to be recognised as legitimate and key determinants of actions experiences and successes in both transition to school and mathematics learning and the belief that young children are powerful mathematics learners who can demonstrate this power as they start school In each chapter authors reflect on their work in the area of mathematics and transition to school place that work within the overall context of research in these fields predict the trajectory of this work in the future and consider the implications of the work both theoretically and practically

Numerical Development - From cognitive functions to neural underpinnings Korbinnian Moeller, Elise Klein, Klaus F Willmes - von Hinckeldey, Karin

Kucian, 2015-02-24 Living at the beginning of the 21st century requires being numerate because numerical abilities are not only essential for life prospects of individuals but also for economic interests of post industrial knowledge societies Thus numerical development is at the core of both individual as well as societal interests There is the notion that we are already born with a very basic ability to deal with small numerosities Yet this often called number sense seems to be very restricted approximate and driven by perceptual constraints During our numerical development in formal e.g. school but also informal contexts e.g. family street we acquire culturally developed abstract symbol systems to represent exact numerosities in particular number words and Arabic digits refining our numerical capabilities In recent years numerical development has gained increasing research interest documented in a growing number of behavioural neuro scientific educational cross cultural and neuropsychological studies addressing this issue Additionally our understanding of how numerical competencies develop has also benefitted considerably from the advent of different neuro imaging techniques allowing for an evaluation of developmental changes in the human brain In sum we are now starting to put together a more and more coherent picture of how numerical competencies develop and how this development is associated with neural changes as well In the end this knowledge might also lead to a better understanding of the reasons for atypical numerical development which often has grievous consequences for those who suffer from developmental dyscalculia or mathematics learning disabilities Therefore this Research Topic deals with all aspects of numerical development findings from behavioural performance to underlying neural substrates from cross sectional to longitudinal evaluations from healthy to clinical populations To this end we included empirical contributions using different experimental methodologies but also theoretical contributions review articles or opinion papers

Hirji: Growing Up With Tanzania ,2023-04-05 In Growing up with Tanzania Karim Hirji a renowned Professor of Medical Statistics and Fellow of the Tanzania Academy of Science presents a multi faceted evocative portrait of his joyous but conflicted passage to adulthood during colonial and early Uhuru Tanzania His smooth style engages the reader with absorbing true tales cultural currents critical commentary and progressive possibilities By vibrantly contrasting the hope filled sixties with the cynical modern era he also lays bare the paradoxes of personal life and society past and present

Routledge Handbook of Public Communication of Science and Technology Massimiano Bucchi,Brian Trench,2014-06-20 Communicating science and technology is a high priority of many research and policy institutions a concern of many other private and public bodies and an established subject of training and education Over the past few decades the field has developed and expanded significantly both in terms of professional practice and in terms of research and reflection The Routledge Handbook of Public Communication of Science and Technology provides a state of the art review of this fast growing and increasingly important area through an examination of the research on the main actors issues and arenas involved In this brand new revised edition the book brings the reviews up to date and deepens the analysis As well as substantial reworking of many chapters it gives more attention to digital media and the global aspects of science communication with the inclusion of four new chapters Several new contributors are added to leading mass communication scholars sociologists public relations practitioners science writers and others featured herein With key questions for further discussion highlighted in each chapter the handbook is a student friendly resource and its scope and expert contributors mean it is also ideal for both practitioners and professionals working in the field Combining the perspectives of different disciplines and of different geographical and cultural contexts this original text provides an interdisciplinary and global approach to the public communication of science and technology It is a valuable resource for students researchers educators and professionals in media and journalism sociology the history of science and science and technology
