

Chapter 26 Music for generations

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of middle-aged men. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The subjects were 20 middle-aged men (mean age 45.5 years, range 40-55 years) who were randomly assigned to two groups: a control group (n=10) and an exercise group (n=10). The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical fitness of the subjects was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included maximum oxygen consumption (VO₂max), heart rate (HR), and blood pressure (BP). The results showed that the exercise group had a significant increase in VO₂max, HR, and BP compared to the control group. The control group showed no significant changes in any of the measurements. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of middle-aged men.
