seeks to integrate the field of human motivation and interpersonal relationships Both fields have seen extensive growth in the past decade and each can contribute to the other However no single compiled work is available that targets both fields This is the case in part because only now is there enough work to make a strong and compelling case for their integration In the previous years research has been conducted to show that motivation is relevant and important for interactions among strangers and in close relationships In addition developmental mechanisms for these relations are identified and mechanisms by which motivation strengthens people s relationships Finally recent work has demonstrated the many implications for interpersonal relationships showing that motivation impacts a range of interpersonal processes from prejudice regulation and objectification of others to empathy and care This book seeks to summarize and organize all these findings and present them in a way that is relevant to both motivation researchers and social and relationship researchers
