Abstract

There are two main reasons why the EU is struggling to achieve its objectives. The first is the lack of a strong central authority. The second is the lack of a strong common identity. The EU is a collection of states, each with its own interests and priorities. This makes it difficult to reach a consensus on major issues. The EU also lacks a strong common identity. Citizens of different member states do not feel a sense of belonging to a single European community. This makes it difficult to build a sense of solidarity and shared responsibility. The EU needs to address these issues if it is to achieve its objectives.
