

Determining Comparative Advantage

Voluntary trade between two individuals or two countries occurs if both parties find that they will benefit. Producers have an incentive to make products for which they have a lower opportunity cost than other producers. When both producers specialize according to their comparative advantage, they increase the total amount of goods and services that are available for consumption. To determine who has a comparative advantage in producing a particular item, we need to calculate each producer's opportunity costs of creating the item. The way we calculate opportunity cost depends on how the productivity data are expressed.

There are two ways to measure productivity: the "input method" and the "output method." We can calculate the quantity of output produced from a given amount of inputs, or we can measure the amount of inputs necessary to create one unit of output. Examples of output are tons of wheat per acre, miles per gallon, words per minute, apples per tree, and subscriptions produced per hour. Examples of input are number of hours to do a job, number of gallons of paint to paint a house, and number of acres to feed a horse. We will work through an example that expresses productivity from the perspective of an input measure and an output measure.

Part A: Two Approaches to Comparative Advantage

-  Student Alert: In using these models to determine the lower-opportunity costs from both an input and output viewpoint, you must pay attention to the format of the chart. It makes a difference!

Input Method

The "input method" provides data on the amount of resources needed to produce one unit of output. Table 1-3.1 gives productivity information for Ted and Nancy.

Productivity Data Using the Input Method

	Time required to produce one radio	Time required to produce one bushel of wheat
Ted	20 minutes	5 minutes
Nancy	30 minutes	15 minutes

Ted has an absolute advantage in the production of both radios and wheat because he uses fewer resources (time) to produce each item than does Nancy. Even though this might suggest that Ted cannot benefit from trade with Nancy, our examination of the opportunity costs of production will show that is not the case.
