Automotive Development Processes Julian Weber, 2009-06-22 The global crisis the automotive industry has slipped into over the second half of 2008 has set a fierce spotlight not only on which cars are the right ones to bring to the market but also on how these cars are developed Be it OEMs developing new models suppliers integrating themselves deeper into the development processes of different OEMs analysts estimating economical risks and opportunities of automotive investments or even governments creating and evaluating scenarios for financial aid for suffering automotive companies At the end of the day it is absolutely indispensable to comprehensively understand the processes of automotive development the core subject of this book Let's face it More than a century after Carl Benz Wilhelm Maybach and Gottlieb Daimler developed and produced their first motor vehicles the overall concept of passenger cars has not changed much Even though components have been considerably optimized since then motor cars in the 21st century are still driven by combustion engines that transmit their propulsive power to the road's face via gearboxes transmission shafts and wheels which together with spring damper units allow driving stability and ride comfort Vehicles are still navigated by means of a steering wheel that turns the front wheels and the required control elements are still located on a dashboard in front of the driver who operates the car sitting in a seat      The Motor World , 1911      Brick , 1942      Snowplow Simulator Training Evaluation , 2006 Snowplow drivers must operate 200 000 units of equipment in blinding snowstorms and demanding traffic conditions Yet traditional training for new drivers with limited funding and staff may be only two or three storm shifts with a partner trainer For this level of responsibility training needs to be enhanced to improve driver safety and reduce risk The Arizona Department of Transportation ADOT outsourced simulator training for snowplow operators in rural Arizona in late 2004 A mobile simulator classroom visited five ADOT districts Globe Flagstaff Holbrook Kingman and Safford to deliver a half day introductory course with both classroom and simulator training segments This Year One 2004 05 winter trainee group included 149 snowplow drivers In Winter Two 2005 06 more in depth training was given on a dedicated driving simulator unit purchased for ADOT s Globe Maintenance District All 61 of Globe s snowplow drivers took two courses situational awareness training in the fall and then fuel management and shifting skills in the spring All Year Two trainers were experienced ADOT snowplow operators from the Globe District An interdisciplinary team from Arizona State University ASU evaluated the effectiveness of simulator based training for snowplow drivers as a new dimension in ADOT s winter maintenance training program The primary focus was on driver response to simulator training and the effectiveness of that training in terms of public safety and potential cost savings Clear quantitative results on this small scale have been limited but two years of experience with simulator trained snowplow operators in Arizona has resulted in optimism about the potential of simulators as an integral part of a comprehensive winter maintenance and driver skill training program Based on the Year Two results from Globe and new personnel training needs ADOT procured two more simulators for Holbrook and Flagstaff Districts in mid 2006 A Working Group was formed of field trainers from the three simulator districts to refine and focus the training courses A new third year study will expand on this analysis with a focus on results of training in proper gear shifting a control level skill to improve fuel efficiency and to reduce repair costs As the study proceeds it will continue to evaluate the simulators effectiveness providing quantitative documentation to reinforce the qualitative results and to define broader benefits of the driving simulator for heavy equipment operations
