Klevezal, 2017-10-19 This text focuses on the principles and methods of using growth layers formed in teeth and bones of mammals to make a judgement on essential traits of the animal's life history. In nearly all mammalian species including man the age of individuals can be determined from the number of growth layers and at least in some of them it is possible to estimate the season of an animal's birth and death age of sexual maturation periodicity of reproduction certain feeding habits and other aspects of the individual's biology. It is also possible from tooth enamel analysis to assess doses of radiation accumulated by animals and human beings during their lifetime. Pancreatic Cancer Gloria H. Su, 2008-02-01 Pancreatic ductal adenocarcinoma is the fourth leading cause of cancer death in the United States. Annually approximately 30 000 Americans are diagnosed with the disease and most will die from it within five years. Pancreatic ductal adenocarcinoma is unique because of its late onset in age high mortality small tumor samples infiltrated with normal cells and a lack of both early detection and effective therapies. Some of these characteristics have made studying this disease a challenge. Pancreatic cancer develops as a result of the accumulation of genetic alterations in cancer causing genes such as the oncogenes and the tumor suppressor genes. In the last decade major progress has been made in identifying important oncogenes and tumor suppressor genes for the disease. In Pancreatic Cancer Methods and Protocols we review the classical techniques that have contributed to the advances in pancreatic research and introduce new strategies that we hope will add to future breakthroughs in the field of cancer biology. Pancreatic Cancer Methods and Protocols provides a broad range of protocols for molecular cellular pathological and statistical analyses of sporadic and familial pancreatic cancer. It covers topics from in vitro cell cultures to in vivo mouse models DNA to protein manipulation and mutation analyses to treatment development. We believe that our book will prove an invaluable source of proven protocols for those who are interested in either basic or translational research in pancreatic cancer
