In the coming decades, feeding a growing population will become more difficult.

Overpopulation, global warming, the spread of diseases and pests, and changes in global climate may make growing food more difficult.

What a good idea!

PRODUCE FARMING

Vertical Farming

Vertical farming is a type of food production that grows crops in vertically stacked layers. It is a sustainable way of growing food that uses less water and land than traditional farming. It can also be done in urban areas, reducing the need for long-distance transport of food.

Hydroponics

Hydroponics is a method of growing plants without soil. The plants are grown in a nutrient-rich water solution. This method uses less water than traditional farming and can be done in a controlled environment, reducing the risk of pests and diseases.

Aquaponics

Aquaponics is a system that combines hydroponics with aquaculture. It involves growing plants in a nutrient-rich water solution while also raising fish. The fish waste provides nutrients for the plants, and the plants help filter the water for the fish.
