Issues relating to new technologies and the changing state of the media industry are ongoing concerns, but some of the most difficult questions go to the actual structure of media education itself. Is it best represented as an integrated field? Should it merge with other communication subfields or potentially split into several separate fields? Media practitioners complicate matters further by questioning the necessity for media education at all. The continued consideration of and reaction to these issues will have a significant effect on media-related education and its associated practices. In Mass Media Education in Transition, Thomas Dickson gives careful consideration to the state of media education and its future directions. He provides a history of mass media-related education as well as an overview of the major issues affecting media education at the end of the 20th century. He incorporates the visions of media education leaders as to the possible directions the field may take in the next century and includes in his discussion information that has been previously unknown or not readily available to media educators. This volume provides a broad view of the major issues affecting all aspects of media education: print and broadcast, journalism, advertising, public relations, and media studies. It also offers detailed insights as to the possibilities that lie ahead as the field continues to develop: a new professionalism or a return to a prior vision of media-related education or possibly something quite different. Seeking Equity for Women in Journalism and Mass Communication Education Ramona R. Rush, Carol E. Oukrop, Pamela J. Creedon, 2013-04-03 This volume concentrates on the study and efforts of women and minority men to gain respect and parity in journalism and mass communication and focuses on trends over the past three decades Contributions to the volume provide a history of the equity efforts and offer updates on equity in the academy and in the professions Theoretical and international perspectives on equity are also included as are the concerns about equity from the new generations now coming into the profession This anthology serves as a benchmark of women s current status in journalism and mass communication and provides a call to action for the future As such it is required reading for all concerned with establishing equity throughout the discipline Journalism Education, Training and Employment Bob Franklin, Donica Mensing, 2010-12-14 During this period of rapid and significant change in journalistic practices journalism educators are re examining their own profession and contributing to the invention of new models and practices This edited volume of studies by respected international scholars describes the diverse issues journalism educators are grappling with and the changes they are making in purpose and practice The book is organized into three sections education training and employment that explore common themes How the assumptions embedded in journalism education are being examined and revised in the light of transformative changes in communication How the definitions of journalism and journalists are broadening in scope and what this means for educators How newsrooms and training programs around the world are being re examined and made more effective An introductory essay and section summaries provide context for the thirteen chapters that constitute the collection The section on journalism education explores fundamental ways educators are seeking to make their institutions and practices stronger and more responsive The section on training includes case studies of journalism training programs in sub Saharan Africa Turkey Sweden and the U S The final section examines the job prospects and employment market for journalism students with data from the U S U K Australia and Sweden The scope of issues considered in the book makes it a valuable resource for journalism scholars from around the world as well as doctoral students journalism and communication administrators in universities organizations that fund journalism training programs and practitioners interested in understanding employment and education trends Journalism Education for the Digital Age Brian Creech, 2021-05-30 This book examines pressing debates concerning how and why journalism education should respond to digital changes in and around the industry and questions market oriented ideology and civic responsibility in the field Surveying a broad field of discourse and research into journalism education Creech shows how public ideals market logics and industry concerns have come to animate discussions about digital journalism education and journalism s future and how academic structures and cultures are positioned as a key obstacle to attaining that future The book examines labor conditions critiques of journalism education as an institution and curricular change with reference to how conversations around race fake news and digital infrastructures impact the field Creech argues for a critical pedagogy of journalism education one that pushes beyond jobs training and instead is centred around a commitment to public and civic value via a liberal arts tradition made practicable for the digital age This insightful book is vital reading for journalism educators and
