15. A population is said to be homogeneous when all individuals in that population are characterized by the same traits. For a population to be homogeneous, all the individuals must have the same traits.
16. A heterogeneous population is one in which different individuals have different characteristics. For example, a population of people may have different heights, weights, and eye colors. This is a heterogeneous population.
17. Mean is a measure of the central tendency of a set of data. It is calculated by adding up all the values and dividing by the number of values.
18. Median is a measure of the central tendency of a set of data. It is the middle value when the data is arranged in order.
19. Mode is a measure of the central tendency of a set of data. It is the value that appears most frequently.
20. Standard deviation is a measure of the spread or dispersion of a set of data. It is calculated by taking the square root of the average of the squared deviations from the mean.
21. Normal distribution is a type of probability distribution that is symmetric and bell-shaped. It is characterized by its mean, standard deviation, and skewness.
22. Sampling error is the difference between the sample mean and the population mean. It is caused by the fact that the sample is only a subset of the population.
23. Non-sampling error is any error that is not caused by the sampling process. It can be caused by a variety of factors, including measurement error, non-response, and coverage error.
24. Response rate is the percentage of the sample that responds to the survey. It is an important indicator of the quality of the data.
25. Non-response bias is a type of bias that occurs when the people who do not respond to the survey differ from the people who do respond in a way that affects the results.
