Mercury versus non-mercury sphygmomanometers, 2012 A mercury manual sphygmomanometer is a device attached to the forearm to record arterial pulsations Basic components include an inflatable cuff to put pressure on the artery a pressure measuring scale and a bulb to inflate the cuff As the cuff is inflated the mercury in the manometer rises through the column and the pressure is displayed on the scale A stethoscope is placed over the brachial artery of the elbow to detect the systolic and diastolic pressure during the slow deflation of the pressure of the cuff Since the instrument relies on the human judgment to detect systolic and diastolic pressure it is termed an auscultatory device Accuracy of mercury sphygmomanometers depend on proper validation calibration and maintenance Several factors may affect the accuracy including measurement technique proper cuff size proper placement of the cuff accurate recording of the systolic and diastolic endpoints patient's level of anxiety and patient physician interaction e.g white coat response Despite its limitations the mercury sphygmomanometer is still considered gold standard in terms of accuracy There are two common types of non mercury sphygmomanometers aneroid and oscillometric devices The aneroid devices are also operated manually and require a normal blood pressure cuff and a stethoscope but are liquid free and use mechanical parts to relay the blood pressure to the gauge The oscillometric devices are operated automatically and the inflation and deflation of the cuff are controlled electronically Based on the pressure wave changes an algorithm in the oscillating device is used to calculate the systolic and diastolic pressures which are displayed on a digital readout Accuracy of mercury free sphygmomanometers also depends on proper maintenance calibration and validation 4 The perceived benefits of oscillometric devices are that they are more accurate less time consuming easier to operate and safer in terms of being mercury free The aim of this report is to review the comparison

Drug Discovery and Evaluation: Methods in Clinical Pharmacology H.Gerhard Vogel,Jochen Maas,Alexander Gebauer,2010-12-15 Drug Discovery and Evaluation has become a more and more difficult expensive and time consuming process The effect of a new compound has to be detected by in vitro and in vivo methods of pharmacology The activity spectrum and the potency compared to existing drugs have to be determined As these processes can be divided up stepwise we have designed a book series Drug Discovery and Evaluation in the form of a recommendation document The methods to detect drug targets are described in the first volume of this series Pharmacological Assays comprising classical methods as well as new technologies Before going to man the most suitable compound has to be selected by pharmacokinetic studies and experiments in toxicology These preclinical methods are described in the second volume Safety and Pharmacokinetic Assays Only then are first studies in human beings allowed Special rules are established for Phase I studies Clinical pharmacokinetics are performed in parallel with human studies on tolerability and therapeutic effects Special studies according to various populations and different therapeutic indications are necessary These items are covered in the third volume Methods in Clinical Pharmacology
