Mitrani, 2013-11-11 It is widely recognized that the complexity of parallel and distributed systems is such that proper tools must be employed during their design stage in order to achieve the quantitative goals for which they are intended This volume collects recent research results obtained within the Basic Research Action Qmips which bears on the quantitative analysis of parallel and distributed architectures Part 1 is devoted to research on the usage of general formalisms stemming from theoretical computer science in quantitative performance modeling of parallel systems It contains research papers on process algebras on Petri nets and on queueing networks The contributions in Part 2 are concerned with solution techniques This part is expected to allow the reader to identify among the general formalisms of Part I those that are amenable to an efficient mathematical treatment in the perspective of quantitative information The common theme of Part 3 is the application of the analytical results of Part 2 to the performance evaluation and optimization of parallel and distributed systems Part 1 Stochastic Process Algebras are used by N Gotz H Hermanns U Herzog V Mertsiotakis and M Rettetbach as a novel approach for the structured design and analysis of both the functional behaviour and performability i e performance and dependability characteristics of parallel and distributed systems This is achieved by integrating stochastic modeling and analysis into the powerful and well investigated formal description techniques of process algebras      Directory Modern

Language Association of America, 2005      Diet and Breast Cancer American Institute for Cancer Research, Elizabeth K. Weisburger, 2012-12-06 The fourth annual American Institute for Cancer Research AICR conference on diet nutrition and cancer was held at the L'Enfant Plaza Hotel in Washington D C September 2-3 1993 In keeping with present concerns and in line with current trends the theme was Diet and Breast Cancer This proceedings volume is comprised of chapters from the platform presentations of the two day conference and abstracts from the poster session held at the end of the first day Experimentally there is sufficient evidence to support a relationship between dietary fat and the risk of breast cancer A meta analysis was provided by data from 114 experiments with over 10 000 animals divided into groups fed ad libitum on diets with different levels or sources of fat or different levels of energy restriction This exercise suggested that linoleic acid was a major determinant of mammary tumor development but that other fatty acids also enhanced mammary tumor development in animals However as mentioned by several speakers results from epidemiological studies often are conflicting thus leading to confusion among both health professionals and the public Surveys of specific populations which have migrated from countries with low breast cancer rates to those with higher rates are often some of the most compelling studies with respect to a high fat diet breast cancer association Nonetheless various cohort and prospective studies some quite large did not appear to show a relationship between consumption of fat any type and breast cancer     Who's who Among American High School Students, 2005/2006 ,2006     Who's who Among Hispanic Americans Amy L.
