the second group (the "control" group) was a (real) classroom beginning its 10-week study of the book. The first group (the "treatment" group) was the other class.
 However, there was one major difference between the two groups: the teacher of the control group was not a member of the research team, and the teacher of the treatment group was. The teacher of the treatment group was trained in the use of the book, and was also a member of the research team.

1990 and 2000 is 200,000, representing an increase of 100 percent. According to the 2000 census, more than 100,000 people live in the city of San Francisco, and the city's population is projected to increase to 1,000,000 by the year 2020. The city's population is projected to increase to 1,000,000 by the year 2020.

These approaches to early childhood education are in themselves not in any danger of being replaced by the kind of early childhood education that is being promoted by the OECD. The OECD approach is based on a different theoretical vision of what early-stage childhood education can do for children. It is difficult to see how early-stage childhood education can do this. It is, however, not likely that you should eliminate the OECD approach without introducing additional work to ensure that children are able to fully participate with their peers in the early childhood setting.
