A schematic diagram of a three-link planar robot arm. The first joint is a revolute joint (labeled 'revolute') connecting the base to the first link. The second joint is a prismatic joint (labeled 'prismatic') connecting the first link to the second link. The third joint is a revolute joint (labeled 'revolute') connecting the second link to the third link. The links are represented by thick black lines, and the joints are indicated by specific symbols.

12. Explain the original reason why we say that the universe will "flatten" if the density is precisely the critical density. Would the universe have flattened out if the density were above or below the critical density?
