

LESSON 9: INTERPRETATION OF ASSESSMENT DATA

REMEMBER!

Type of Test Scores	Description	How to Interpret
Raw score	- It is simply unaltered data from a test or observation. It is recorded in its original form by a researcher before being subjected to any statistical analysis. Typically raw scores are converted to standard scores or percentiles before being used in comparisons	- An individual's raw score is converted to a number indicating the percent of people in the reference group who scored below the test taker. For example, a score at the 70th percentile means that the individual's score is the same as or higher than the scores of 70% of those who took the test.
Percentage Score	- A percentage score is a number expressed as a fraction of 100.	- The percentage of correct answers, or score, is the number of correct answers divided by the total number of questions, multiplied by 100.
Percentage Rank	- It is the percentage of the scores in the frequency distribution which are lower. - This means that the percentage of the examinees in the norm group who score below the score of interest (Crocker & Algina, 1986). - It is used to clarify the interpretation of scores on standardized tests.	- Percentile ranks are often expressed as a number between 1 and 99, with 50 being the average. So if a student scored a percentile rank of 87, it would mean that they performed better than 87% of the other students in his norm group.
Standard Score	- The standard score in statistic is the number of standard deviations by which the value of a raw score is above or below the mean value of what is being observed or measured.	- The value of the z-score tells you how many standard deviations you are away from the mean. If a z-score is equal to 0, it is on the mean. A positive z-score indicates the raw score is higher than the mean average. For example, if a z-score is equal to +1, it is 1 standard deviation above the mean. Obtained from raw scores by norming information gathered when the test is developed.
Z- score	- Is the number of standard deviation unit score is above or below the mean of a given distribution. A positive Z- score = measures the	Formula is standard score z is the difference of each value in the data set x minus the mean of all values on the data set divided by s which is the standard deviation. $Z = \frac{\text{Data point (X)} - \text{Mean}}{\text{Standard Deviation}}$
