wavelength. Above the spectrum in the dialog window, you will find boxes to set the excitation wavelength using an AOTF.

Click the check box next to the laser name to activate the laser. Set the output for the laser line by moving the slide on the corresponding scale to the desired value or double-click the percentage value for the laser output. Click on the symbol and select the desired beam splitter. Neutral filters such as the RT 30/70 filter are used in reflection applications to lead the excitation light to the sample and the reflected light to the detection pinhole. Specify the wavelength range for the detection by dragging the two ends of the slider to the desired positions on the scale or double-click the slide bar to open an additional dialog window in which you can enter a precise value for the start point and the end point of the wavelength range. You will achieve the best resolution when the refraction indexes of the embedding medium and or the specimen are matched to the refraction index of the objective medium      The Leica Manual - Scholar's Choice Edition Willard E Morgan, Henry M Lester, 2015-02-15 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work was reproduced from the original artifact and remains as true to the original work as possible Therefore you will see the original copyright references library stamps as most of these works have been housed in our most important libraries around the world and other notations in the work This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work As a reproduction of a historical artifact this work may contain missing or blurred pages poor pictures errant marks etc Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant      The New Leica Manual Leica, 1951
