Styles of Reasoning in the British Life Sciences James Elwick, 2007-09-15 Elwick explores how the concept of compound individuality brought together life scientists working in pre Darwinian London Scientists conducting research in comparative anatomy physiology cellular microscopy embryology and the neurosciences repeatedly stated that plants and animals were compounds of smaller independent units Discussion of a bodily economy was widespread But by 1860 the most flamboyant discussions of compound individuality had come to an end in Britain Elwick relates the growth and decline of questions about compound individuality to wider nineteenth century debates about research standards and causality He uses specific technical case studies to address overarching themes of reason and scientific method
