

Reaction Kinetics Lab Reporting Worksheet

In science, reporting what has been done in a laboratory setting is incredibly important for communicating, replicating, and validating findings. However, writing scientific reports can be a little overwhelming. There are a set of agreed upon components that the scientific community requires when reporting scientific research. Answer the following questions to describe what occurred during the lab you conducted in Labster. Be sure to use complete sentences and descriptions that fully represent what you experienced. Writing a lab report is less about being correct or incorrect, than it is accurately reporting what happened and why. So, do not worry about reporting data that might seem counterintuitive or unexpected. Focus on clearly communicating what you did and what you observed.

Write your answers on a new line.

- What was the title of the lab you completed?
 - Reaction Kinetics: the essentials

1. Topic

- What was the subject you were trying to understand better in the lab?
 - Describe the main factors that influence the rate of a chemical reaction (reactant concentration, temperature, solvent, use of catalyst), and give examples of their effect.
 - Assess the reaction rate of simple reactions by examining concentration data over time.
 - Explain the reaction between temperature and reaction rate.
 - Describe the relation between collision theory and activation energy.
 - Interpret reaction energy diagrams and relate them to energy changes during the course of a reaction.
 - Suggest a suitable experimental setup for measuring the kinetics of a reaction.

2. Background Information

- What information from the textbook and classroom is relevant for the subject you were trying to gain a better understanding of in the lab? Identify the concepts and explain how they are related to the lab topic.
 - During the reading this week, the chapter explained the details of terms that may have been known, but not understood at a chemistry level. For example, Temperature is defined as a varying aspect that can change the outcome of a reaction. A solvent is a substance in which other materials dissolve to form a solution. It went into detail about what a catalyst is, being a substance that enables a chemical reaction to proceed at a faster than usual rate under specific altered conditions than otherwise possible, but the substance itself does not change within the reaction. We were exposed to collision theory, the effect of concentration and temperature of the reaction rate. Activation energy the minimum energy required to initiate a reaction, the lower the activation energy the higher reaction rate.
- During the lab, what information from the theory section provided additional background information about the subject? (To review the theory section, launch the lab and click the Theory tab on the top of the data pad). Identify the concepts and explain how they are related to the lab topic.
 - The theory section provided concentrated information that was relevant to the concepts that we were practicing. Reaction rate is the change in concentration of a reactant or products in
