

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import policies, free trade is a system wherein all the goods of governments have free trade across international frontiers for the benefit of their own economies. Once the free trade system is in place, there have been various international trade free zones, multi-regional zones, trading blocs, etc. Examples of these zones include the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), the World Trade Organization (WTO), the European Union (EU), and the South Asian Free Trade Zone (SAFTA) zones.

However, there are some barriers to the economic activities across free trade zones that cannot be ignored. Some of the barriers to free trade are: 1. Tariffs: Tariffs are taxes imposed on the imported goods. The imposition of tariffs on imported goods can lead to a decrease in demand for the imported goods. This decrease in demand can lead to a decrease in the price of the imported goods. The decrease in price can lead to a decrease in the quantity of the imported goods. This decrease in quantity can lead to a decrease in the revenue of the government. 2. Quotas: Quotas are limits on the quantity of goods that can be imported. This can lead to a decrease in demand for the imported goods. This decrease in demand can lead to a decrease in the price of the imported goods. The decrease in price can lead to a decrease in the quantity of the imported goods. This decrease in quantity can lead to a decrease in the revenue of the government.

International Trade

It shows that international trade has a total supply curve, which is the sum of the domestic supply and the foreign supply. The total supply curve is upward sloping. The intersection of the total supply curve and the demand curve is at price P_2 and quantity Q_2 . This is the equilibrium price and quantity in the international market. The domestic supply curve is upward sloping. The intersection of the domestic supply curve and the demand curve is at price P_1 and quantity Q_1 . This is the equilibrium price and quantity in the domestic market. The foreign supply curve is upward sloping. The intersection of the foreign supply curve and the demand curve is at price P_3 and quantity Q_3 . This is the equilibrium price and quantity in the foreign market.
