Selling British Columbia Michael Dawson, 2004 Dawson s analysis draws on promotional pamphlets newspaper advertisements and films as well as archival sources about government civic and international tourism organizations He argues that in order to understand the roots of the fully fledged consumer culture that developed in Canada it is necessary to understand the connections between the 1930s 1940s and the postwar era He underlines the significance of the Depression and the Second World War ostensibly periods of underconsumption For the development of tourism promotion and consumerism in general This cultural history will be welcomed by British Columbian and Canadian historians as well as scholars of consumer culture and tourism Jacket

Whale-watching James Higham, Lars Bejder, Rob Williams, 2014-03-27 Within little more than a generation whale watching has been subject to global industrial development It has been portrayed by destinations and business operators and advocated by environmental groups as a sustainable activity and an alternative to whaling However in recent years the sustainability of these activities has increasingly been questioned as research shows that repeated disturbance by boat traffic can severely disrupt critical behaviours of cetaceans in the wild Bringing together contributions by international experts this volume addresses complex issues associated with commercial whale watching sustainable development and conservation of the global marine environment It highlights widely expressed concerns for the failure of policy planning and management and pinpoints both long standing and emerging barriers to sustainable practice Featuring numerous case studies the book provides critical insights into the diverse socio cultural political economic and ecological contexts of this global industry highlighting the challenges and opportunities that arise along the pathways to sustainability
