Sudden arrhythmic death: from basic science to clinical practice Gareth D. Matthews, 2014-10-02 With upwards of 4 5 million deaths worldwide each year and more than one tenth of these occurring in those with no previously documented heart disease sudden arrhythmic death SAD is both a major public health burden and a highly emotive issue for society at large Recent years have witnessed a marked expansion in our knowledge of the physiology underlying SAD both in the context of hereditary and acquired cardiac disorders Thanks largely to work in genetically modified animals the growth in our understanding of mechanisms underlying arrhythmia in the hereditary channelopathies has been particularly marked Our growing knowledge of the fundamental mechanisms underlying SAD has so far failed to spur substantial developments in clinical practice Despite a large body of work in both humans and animals it remains impossible to confidently identify those at high risk of SAD making pre emptive therapy a challenge What is more with the thankful exception of the implantable cardioverter defibrillators and pharmacological agents in very specific situations there has been depressingly little progress in finding new and effective therapies This Research Topic aims to go some way towards bridging the gap between advances in basic science and the development and delivery of new therapies It brings together original research contributions and review articles from key opinion leaders in the field focusing on the direct clinical implications of the basic science research now and in the future

Restoring Opportunity Greg J. Duncan, Richard J. Murnane, 2014-01-01 In this landmark volume Greg J Duncan and Richard J Murnane lay out a meticulously researched case showing how in a time of spiraling inequality strategically targeted interventions and supports can help schools significantly improve the life chances of low income children The authors offer a brilliant synthesis of recent research on inequality and its effects on families children and schools They describe the interplay of social and economic factors that has made it increasingly hard for schools to counteract the effects of inequality and that has created a widening wedge between low and high income students Restoring Opportunity provides detailed portraits of proven initiatives that are transforming the lives of low income children from prekindergarten through high school All of these programs are research tested and have demonstrated sustained effectiveness over time and at significant scale Together they offer a powerful vision of what good instruction in effective schools can look like The authors conclude by outlining the elements of a new agenda for education reform Restoring Opportunity is a crowning contribution from these two leading economists in the field of education and a passionate call to action on behalf of the young people on whom our nation s future depends Copublished with the Russell Sage Foundation

An Age of Accountability John L. Rury, 2023-10-13 An Age of Accountability highlights the role of test based accountability as a policy framework in American education from 1970 to 2020 For more than half a century the quest to hold schools and educators accountable for academic achievement has relied almost exclusively on standardized assessment The theory of change embedded in almost all test based accountability programs held that assessment with stipulated consequences could lead to major improvements in schools This was accomplished politically by proclaiming lofty goals of attaining universal proficiency and closing achievement gaps which repeatedly failed to materialize But even after very clear disappointments no other policy framework has emerged to challenge its hegemony The American public today has little confidence in institutions to improve the quality of goods and services they provide especially in the public sector As a consequence many Americans continue to believe that accountability remains a vital necessity even if educators and policy scholars disagree
