Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The study was conducted in a community setting. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The primary outcome was the change in physical and psychological health. The secondary outcome was the change in body composition. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant improvement in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The exercise group also had a significant improvement in body composition. The results suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
