Drinking in the Adolescent and Young Brain, Volume II Eduardo Lopez-Caneda, Salvatore Campanelle, Séverine Lannoy, Carina

Carbia, 2024-01-23 This Research Topic is the second volume of Research Topic Binge Drinking in the Adolescent and Young Brain Please see the first volume here Binge drinking BD also known as heavy episodic drinking or college drinking is a highly prevalent pattern in most Western countries characterized by the intake of large amounts of alcohol in a short time followed by periods of abstinence This excessive pattern of alcohol use is a regular practice in around a third of European and American youth The high prevalence of BD at this age is of particular concern since adolescents are in a period of special vulnerability to neurotoxic effects of alcohol mainly due to the structural and functional changes going on in the brain throughout this key developmental stage As showed in the first volume of the Research Topic evidence gathered during the last decade from animal and human studies seems to point out multiple brain anomalies associated with BD at different levels biochemical structural functional but also cognitive and affective In this Second Volume our aim is to bring together the most recent studies namely original research and systematic or critical reviews which provide a comprehensive approach regarding the effects of BD on the adolescent and young brain Thus we aim to include manuscripts from different domains preclinical and clinical research perspectives genetic behavioral neuropsychological clinical psychology psychophysiology neuroimaging etc and methods behavioural biochemical EEG MEG MRI etc Likewise we welcome submissions aimed at examining the effects of BD beyond the brain personality dimensions polygenic risk peripheral inflammation cortisol response gut microbiome etc and approaches focused on reducing BD such as cognitive training and or neuromodulation by tDCS TMS etc The Oral Microbiome in an Ecological Perspective Egija Zaura, Alex Mira, 2015-07-27 The oral cavity harbors an immense diversity of microorganisms including bacteria fungi archaea protozoa and viruses At health oral microbial community is thought to be in a state of homeostasis even after numerous perturbations e g toothbrushing food intake a day The breach in this homeostasis can occur for instance if the perturbations become too excessive e g frequent carbohydrate intake leading to acidification of the community or the host is compromised e g inadequate immune response resulting in persistent inflammation of periodontal tissue Aggressive antimicrobial therapy e g antibiotics in case of periodontal disease or preventive antibiotic therapy before and after dental extractions is commonly applied with all the negative consequences of this approach So far little is known on the interplay between the environmental host and microbial factors in maintaining an ecological balance What are the prerequisites for a healthy oral ecosystem Can we restore an unbalanced oral microbiome How stable is the oral microbiome through time and how robust it is to external perturbations Gaining new insights in the ecological factors sustaining oral health will lead to conceptually new therapies and preventive programs Recent advances in high throughput technologies have brought microbiology as a science to a new era allowing an open ended approach instead of focusing on few opportunistic pathogens With this topic we would like to integrate the current high throughput omics tools such as metagenomics metatranscriptomics metaproteomics or metabolomics with biochemical physiological genetic or clinical parameters within the oral microbial ecosystem We aim to address questions underlying the regulation of the ecological balance in the oral cavity by including the following areas Ecology of oral microbiome at health Ecology of oral microbiome under oral diseases Ecology of oral microbiome during non oral diseases Shifts in the oral microbiome by therapeutic approaches e g antimicrobials replacement therapy pre and probiotics Modeling of oral ecological shifts e g animal models in vitro microcosm models Complex inter and intra kingdom interactions e g bacterial fungal host related to oral ecology Environmental e g diet tobacco host related e g immune response saliva composition and flow and biotic e g bacterial competition factors influencing oral ecology Geographic variation in oral microbial ecology and diversity

Rybicki,Kazuhito Fujiyama,2017-04-27 Plant gene transfer achieved in the early 80s paved the way for the exploitation of the potential of gene engineering to add novel agronomic traits and or to design plants as factories for high added value molecules For this latter area of research the term Molecular Farming was coined in reference to agricultural applications in that major crops like maize and tobacco were originally used basically for pharma applications The concept of the green biofactory implies different advantages over the typical cell factories based on animal cell or microbial cultures already when considering the investment and managing costs of fermenters Although yield stability and quality of the molecules may vary among different heterologous systems and plants are competitive on a case to case basis still the plant factory attracts scientists and technologists for the challenging features of low production cost product safety and easy scale up Once engineered a plant is among the cheapest and easiest eukaryotic system to be bred with simple know how using nutrients water and light Molecules that are currently being produced in plants vary from industrial and pharmaceutical proteins including medical diagnostics proteins and vaccine antigens to nutritional supplements such as vitamins carbohydrates and biopolymers Convergence among disciplines as distant as plant physiology and pharmacology and more recently as omic sciences bioinformatics and nanotechnology increases the options of research on the plant cell factory Farming for Pharming biologics and small molecule medicines is a challenging area of plant biotechnology that may break the limits of current standard production technologies The recent success on Ebola fighting with plant made antibodies put a spotlight on the enormous potential of next generation herbal medicines made especially in the name of the guiding principle of reduction of costs hence reduction of disparities of health rights and as a tool to guarantee adequate health protection in developing countries
