

Abstract The purpose of this study was to examine the effects of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The experimental group (n = 15) participated in a 12-week exercise program, while the control group (n = 15) remained sedentary. The exercise program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions included a warm-up, a low-impact aerobic workout, and a strength training routine. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle. Data were collected at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the experimental group experienced significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and body composition compared to the control group. Additionally, the experimental group reported improvements in mood and self-esteem. The findings suggest that a low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
